HR: The New Evolution

Today's business presents a new wave of HR challenges for its leaders. Once designed primarily as a compliance function, today's HR organization must be agile, business-integrated, data-driven and deeply skilled in attracting, retaining and developing talent. Companies are revisiting the required capabilities of the HR function, but do they have the right capabilities to meet business needs?

On Thursday, April 7, join HARRT at UCLA and Willis Towers Watson for our second Day of Learning event, a unique platform offering new perspectives addressing the volatile marketplace and diverse workforce.

Keynotes and General Sessions:

- Opening keynote: HR the Un-carrier Way — Ben Bratt, Vice President Human Resources, Talent and Organization Capability, T-Mobile
- General session: Navigating the New World of Work: How leading organizations are leaving convention behind — Tracey Malcolm, North America Talent Management Practice Leader, Willis Towers

About HARRT at UCLA

HARRT at UCLA, the Human Resources Round Table, is an organization that promotes the advancement of HR management by creating a dialogue between senior HR executives, and leading academics and thought leaders in the areas of leadership and HR strategy. The organization offers a forum for HR leaders to explore current trends, learn from key experts, network with peers, benefit from the latest research, and partner with the UCLA Anderson School of Management in supporting key student and education programs. For more information including membership, visit www.harrt.ucla.edu.

Sincerely,

HARRT at UCLA
