

Captain Christian Dunbar

Founder
The ETHOS Project

Christian Dunbar recently received his Masters of Business Administration, Entrepreneur and Global Management Tracks. He is the Founder of The ETHOS Project, a social enterprise focusing on mobilizing on campus student leaders to organize, lead, implement and sustain long term social cultural change to eradicate sexual assault from college campuses.

He has been active on Navy SEAL teams for 23 years. He is a U.S. Navy Captain and Deputy Commander in the Naval Special Warfare Center, responsible for all West Coast SEAL teams. He's embarked on nearly a dozen deployments, many in combat, most under his leadership and lasting six months. One of those deployments interrupted his MBA studies, requiring him to take a year's leave of absence to run Special Operations in Afghanistan.

Dunbar grew up in the Midwest and went to college at University of Notre Dame, where he received a BS in Aerospace Engineering. He received two post graduate degrees; MS Defense Analysis, Irregular Warfare, and Space Systems Operations, SPACE OPS from the Naval Post Graduate School.
